

StowTown Records has released, today, the ten-song collection Old Soul by Wayne Haun. Drawing from renowned influences such as Frank Sinatra, Nina Simone, Dean Martin, Barbra Streisand and more, Haun takes the listener on a musical journey to a "time gone by."

For years, the multi-awarded Wayne Haun has been known throughout the music industry as the "go-to" producer for exquisite orchestrations. Working with a variety of accomplished artists - The Perrys, Jessica Simpson, Ernie Haase & Signature Sound, Celine Dion, Jason Crabb, Earl Scruggs and countless others – he is known as "the genius" and has enough awards and nominations to prove it. Now, Haun, let's the world in on another one of his many talents, as a top-notch "crooner."

Wayne Haun comments: "I listened to every genre of music when I was growing up. From Bluegrass to Gospel, Broadway to Jazz, all those influences shaped the musician I am today. When I was introduced to Broadway, Jazz and Big Band – all the amazing and lush instrumentation - I knew I wanted to write, to orchestrate, to create those sounds and I was determined to learn how!"

Containing eight classic tunes, and two brand-new compositions, Old Soul is a musical feast for the ear. With songs like "Give Me The Simple Life," "Are You Havin' Any Fun" (duet with Ernie Haase), "The Sweetest Sounds," "Bye, Bye Baby" and "Here You Come Again" (made popular by Dolly Parton) like you've never heard it before, this is a must-have for any music lover.

Old Soul (StowTown Records/Provident Distribution) is now available at www.ErnieHaase.com and digitally via iTunes, Amazon and Rhapsody and wherever music is sold.
